TO: The Officers and Men of the 23rd Infantry.

A prerequisite to the success of any organization is that its members have pride in their unit. This publication is designed to contribute to that end by acquainting each of us with the record of this regiment and with the individuals that compose it.

Most of us did not serve in this regiment overseas and therefore have not contributed to its war record. However, as its members now have become the guardians of its honors, its traditions, and its standards of duty and service to our country. One hundred and four years of history, five wars and one insurrection, service to one company and two battalions, two Presidential Citations, one battalion, three Congressional Medals of Honor, and one Distinguished Service Cross --- are all part of the image of which we cannot help but feel proud.

Ours is a noble heritage and a great responsibility. If the people of our country should call us again to serve them, they shall find us ready. In the fulfillment of this responsibility we shall take pride in being your commander.

BRIEF HISTORY OF THE 23RD INFANTRY REGIMENT

The Regimentsal motto, "We Serve," has well symbolized the activities of the Twenty-Third Infantry Regiment since its inception on June 26, 1812. Immediately thrust into action in the War of 1812, the Regiment took part in 13 battles and skirmishes, including Sacketts Harbor, Lundy's Lane and Fort Erie. From this notable beginning, the Regiment has a proud and illustrious history with its battleground covering the entire world.

After the War of 1812, the Regiment began peacetime duties and was inactive until joining with other units in 1815 to form the 2d Infantry. On September 21, 1866, the present 23d Infantry Regiment was born. The 2d Battalion, 14th Infantry, from which the Regiment was formed, presented the new Regiment with battle honors for the Peninsula Campaign, Manassas, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Virginia Campaign of 1862 and 1863, Wilderness, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor and Petersburg. The Regiment won additional battle honors for the Arizona Campaign of 1866, the Idaho Campaign of 1868 and the Campaign of Little Big Horn as a result of its participation in the Indian Wars. In 1869 the Regiment furnished the first garrison for the newly acquired Alaskan territory.

During the Spanish-American War, the Regiment landed in the Philippines in July 1898 to assist in the capture of the port of Manila for which action it won a special streamer. Battle honors were won for the Manila and Malolos Campaigns. Returning from the Philippines via the Suez Canal, the Regiment completely circumnavigated the globe and returned to the United States in 1901. Two more tours in the Philippines, including expeditions against the Moros and their infamous chieftains, preceded World War I.

Distinguished honors were won by the 23d Infantry Regiment for its part in World War I. The French fourragere was awarded to the Regiment by the French government for its action in the Meuse-Argonne and Aisne-Marne Campaigns. The streamers for battle honors won for the Lorraine, Aisne, Ile de France, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne campaigns fly proudly from the pikehead of the Regimentsal colors.

From 1919 to 1942 the Regiment, as part of the 2d Infantry Division, was stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where it pioneered in the development of the triangular infantry division and the perfection of airborne infantry tactics and logistics. During 1941 and 1942, the 23d furnished three complete regimentsal cadres for newly activated units and numerous smaller cadres.

During maneuvers in Louisiana in 1942, final tests in military technique and in the use of the latest equipment were completed. By October the Regiment was fully composed as a fighting unit much as it was during World War II. On October 16, the 23d Infantry, along with other units in the 2d Infantry Division, moved to Camp McCoy, Wisconsin. Training for winter warfare began immediately and the 23d Infantry participated in the first large scale winter training maneuvers ever held by a United States Army unit. In temperature as low as 45 degrees below zero, the Regiment tested new equipment and the men became proficient in the use of skis and snowshoes. Culminating this four-month training period, the Regiment was put through schools of specialized training to equip them for the kind of fighting they were expected to encounter from the enemy overseas.

On 27 September 1943, the Regiment left Camp McCoy with the Division, sailing from New York on 8 October 1943 and arriving in Northern Ireland on 20 October. During the winter, amid swirling fogs and the wet Irish weather, the Infantrymen trained in small units for the invasion of Europe. As Spring went by, the quickening of the tempo was felt throughout the Regiment. On 16 April 1944, the Regiment sailed to South Wales, where final preparations were made and moves to the various marshaling areas at Bristol Channel were completed.

D-Day plus 2 found the 23d Infantry Regiment landing on Omaha Beach and beginning immediately its battle to inch its way forward inland. The first prepared enemy stronghold was encountered when the 23d Infantry came up against St Georges d'Elle, which changed hands many times before the German resistance collapsed. In the battle for Hill 192, the 23d Infantry played a conspicuous part.

In this battle the Regiment fought for the first time in an Infantry-Tank-Artillery-Engineer Team. The 23d Infantry joined forces with the 38th Infantry Regiment to reduce the main enemy strongpoint in the St Lo area.

In "Operation Cobra," the wide breakthrough operation which smashed the enemy's strength in Normandy, the 23d Infantry brought all of its forces to the front and struck through St Jean Des Baisants. Beginning on July 26, the Regiment fought its way through small arms fire, mine fields and booby traps to enter this vital town and scatter the German resistance completely.

Etouvy, Vire, Truttemer le Grand and Tinchebray were scenes of bitter fighting for the 23d throughout August as the enemy was fought back to its garrisons at Brest, St Nazaire, Lorient, Dieppe and Le Havre. After resting for a few short days, the Regiment was called into action again with an overnight motor march of 210 miles to Brest, the most heavily fortified of all German Garrisons. From August 21 to September 19, the 23d Infantry, along with other units of the 2d Division, battled the 2d German Paratroop Division in savage and bitter street fighting until the fall of the Fortress to the 2d Infantry Division on 18 September 1944. For its part in this action, the 3rd Battalion received its first Presidential Unit Citation. From the fall of Brest until September 30, the Regiment enjoyed a well deserved rest. Then came a rapid motor and train move of 720 miles to assume new battle positions on the German border along the Siegfried Line just east of St Vith.

A 23d Infantry parade in November marked the first ceremony of American troops on German soil. At this time, Major General Walter M. Robertson, 2d Infantry Division commander, presented decorations for heroism to officers and men of the Regiment. Early in December, the Regiment moved to the vicinity of Elsenborn in preparation for the first attack on the vital Roer Dams. On 14 December 1944, the Division launched the attack into the Siegfried Line at Wehlerscheid.

When the German counteroffensive, the Wehrmacht's last great blow, struck in the Ardennes Forest, all three battalions of the 23d Infantry fought savagely in front of the Siegfried Line. Smashing attack after attack by the fanatic Germans determined to secure Von Rundstedt's breakthrough, the doughboys dug in to stem the enemy advance on all sides.

The German plan of action to capture and cut off the vital supply nets at Liege fell through. In this section, both the 1st Battalion and the Anti-Tank Company received a Presidential Unit Citation and the 3d Battalion was awarded an Oak Leaf Cluster in lieu of a second Presidential Unit Citation. Summing up the action during the early days of December, a message from Lieutenant General Courtney H. Hodges, Commanding the First United States Army, stated: "What the 2d Infantry Division has done in the last four days will live forever in the history of the United States Army."

Snow lay deep along the Siegfried Line as the remnants of Von Rundstedt's panzer divisions were repulsed and the 23rd Regiment prepared for a new offensive through the Ondenval-Ivelingen Pass to clear the way for the armored thrusts into St Vith, Belgium. In conjunction with a 1st Infantry Division drive, the 23d spearheaded a Corps offensive against the German-held St Vith. The bitter January weather, with constant sleet and snow, did all it could to hold up the all-important offensive. But it was raw courage and spectacular individual effort which carried the Regiment and its attached units through these days of bitter fighting. The 2d Battalion of the Regiment won a Presidential Unit Citation for its gallant action in spearheading the Corps attack and reducing the enemy's resistance at the Pass. In this action, the 2d Battalion moved on foot seven miles under severe enemy shelling, then launched a seven-day attack against stubborn enemy resistance. Blizzards, mine fields, and bitter cold failed to stop the dogged advance. Casualties, in many cases, were covered with snow as they fell and froze to death, despite night long searching by exhausted, cold and hungry troops. Vigorous hand-to-hand and bayonet fighting broke out repeatedly before the defending paratroopers could be overcome and the objectives gained.

After several offensive moves in the Siegfried Line area, pushing through the Schleiden Forest and the famous Roer River dams, the 23d Infantry began, with full speed, the wild race to the Rhine. On March 23d, the Regiment made its crossing in the vicinity of Niederbreisig, five miles south of the famed Remagen bridge. Breaking out toward the east, the Regiment streaked toward the Weser River capturing thousands of PW's and reducing many of the troublesome strongpoints of resistance. The Weser crossing caught the Germans completely off guard and the advance was made by the 23d Infantry in a highly successful operation.

Mounted on tanks and tank destroyers, the infantrymen of the 23d drove in 23 days to the vicinity of Merseburg, Germany, just west of Leipzig. This was done in the face of direct fire from over 200 guns of 88 and 128 mm caliber, thus clearing one of Germany's most concentrated flak areas. In the two-day drive from Merseburg to Leipzig, the fifth largest of Germany's cities, the flak guns had to be neutralized one by one. This was the last great offensive in Central Germany. The next advance was halted at the Mulde River, and there the Regiment awaited contact with the Russian Army.

The last action of World War II for the 23d Infantry (into Czechoslovakia), took the Regiment once more into a country where the liberated inhabitants greeted the infantrymen with wild enthusiasm. In Pilsen the 23d Infantry completed its combat history in World War II. It had covered more than 1665 miles in the ETO. Thirty thousand PW's were captured. Two hundred and seventeen days were spent in continuous combat. It was truly a great record in thoroughness, skill, and neverending success.

Fulfilling its duties in occupation, the 23d Infantry assumed responsibility of operating three prison camps in Pilsen in addition to setting up road blocks and restraining lines in cooperation with the Russians.

When the Adjusted Service Rating went into effect, the men of the Regiment eagerly added up their points and calculated their chances of going home. In June the high-point men of the Regiment left Pilsen heading for the assembly areas and on July 12 the 23d Infantry Regiment sailed for the United States aboard the SS Monticello.

After a period of thirty days recuperation on leaves at home, the Regiment reassembled with other units of the 2d Infantry Division at its permanent station, Camp Swift, Texas.

While at Camp Swift, the Regiment engaged in marksmanship training, small unit firing problems, and parades in nearby cities including Dallas, Austin and San Antonio.

On 6 April 1946 while enroute to its new permanent station at Fort Lewis, Washington, the Regiment along with the Division participated in the Army Day Parade in San Francisco.

The Regiment arrived at Fort Lewis on 12 April 1946 and moved into its present area. The Regiment participated in several parades in nearby cities and then began an intensive training cycle which culminated in the amphibious maneuvers at Aliso Canyon in Southern California.

On 15 December 1946 by direction of the War Department, the third battalion was reorganized at a reduced strength of one officer and one enlisted man and the equipment of the battalion was placed in limited storage on the post.
